With their new album 'Are You Sitting Comfortably?' hot off the presses and this current tour with Mike and the Mechanics IQ look set to further build on their steadily growing legions of European fans.

Unlike the myriads of over groomed, single celled one hit wonders IQ have chosen the more traditional route of letting their music rather than their stylists speak for them. Over the course of four albums they have developed a musical style that both dazzles with rhythmic dexterity and seduces with melodic grace. Their sound and style defies the current pigeon hole mentality, instead they bring to the late 80s a re-defined and more mainstreamed version of that broad church once simply known as ROCK.

The band's new album 'Are You Sitting Comfortably?' was recorded late last year and produced by Terry Brown, best known for his work with Canadian techno rockers Rush and more recently Cutting Crew. It is by far the band's most accomplished record to date and perfectly embodies the light and shade of the band, from the propelling rock beat of 'Drive On' to the sublime texture of 'Nothing At All' and contagious hook of their current single 'Sold On You'. IQ are a band that will, as fashions come and go, continue to grow from strength to strength so do yourself a favour and check them out NOW.
